1) Franklin was a very good TA. He was able to explain problems and solutions clearly, if slightly differently from the way the professor taught. I see this as a good thing, as understanding multiple ways of viewing a problem can really boost the understanding of that problem, and get you to think of other problems in ways you may not have previously. Explaining counting arguments can be difficult, but he was able to do so clearly and simply. Overall I had a very good experience with Franklin.
